Statistics

- 42% of Internet users ages 10 to 17 said they viewed porn online in the past 12 months.
- One study reported half of all teenagers had engaged in “sexting,” and, even more surprising, 61% were not aware that sending nude photos is considered underage pornography.

<http://www.cnn.com/2014/11/18/living/teens-sexting-what-parents-can-do/> and <http://www.cnn.com/2015/01/16/living/feat-teens-online-porn-parents/index.html>

The Dark Side of the World Wide Web

One in five U.S. teenagers who regularly log on to the Internet say they have received an unwanted sexual solicitation via the Web.

25% of children have been exposed to unwanted pornographic material online.

Only 1/3 of households with Internet access are actively protecting their children with filtering or blocking software.

75% of children are willing to share personal information online about themselves and their family in exchange for goods and services.

The Dark Side of the World Wide Web

Only approximately 25% of children who encountered a sexual approach or solicitation told a parent or adult.

One in 33 youth received an aggressive sexual solicitation in the past year. This means a predator asked a young person to meet somewhere, called a young person on the phone, and/or sent the young person correspondence, money, or gifts through the U.S. Postal Service.

77% of the targets for online predators were age 14 or older. Another 22% were users ages 10 to 13.

Cyberbullying

- What is cyberbullying?
- How common is it?
- Is it legal or illegal in New York State?
- What can you do if your child is cyberbullied?

Cyberbullying

- What is cyberbullying?
  - Using technology to bully or cause emotional harm.
- How common is it?
  - About 15% of high school students and about 9% of grades 6 – 12 students experience cyberbullying.
- Is it legal or illegal in New York State?
  - It is illegal.
- What can you do if your child is cyberbullied?
  - Cyberbullying by another student can be addressed by the school, even if the bullying takes place off-campus. It is also against the law.

1945 – New York Times Teenage “Bill of Rights”

I

THE RIGHT TO LET CHILDHOOD BE FORGOTTEN.

WE were all children once. But the 'teen-ager likes less than anyone to be reminded that he was a child only yesterday * * * and to be treated as if this were yesterday instead

In the current debate over 'teen-agers, the pendulum has swung between "What is wrong with our children?" and "What is wrong with us?" One result is that the average parent finds himself bewildered.

To help end the confusion, a group of experts of the Jewish Board of Guardians, child-guidance and delinquency-prevention agency of the New York Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, recently met to plan a series of studies and papers based on the lengthy experience of the agency.

Out of the board's discussion came the effort to put down ten simple points covering young people's rights. What follows is substantially "The 'Teen-Age Bill of Rights" that resulted.

I

THE RIGHT TO LET CHILDHOOD BE FORGOTTEN.

WE were all children once. But the 'teen-ager likes less than anyone to be reminded that he was a child only yesterday * * * and to be treated as if this were yesterday instead of today.

Parents often hate to give up their child's childhood—his cuteness, his naive tricks and remarks. They overlook the fact that what is still cute to them is embarrassing to him, that he is as eager, as they are reluctant, to forget his childhood.

Joe is 14 years old. He has always looked up to the "big kids" of 14, and now he is ready to look up to himself. He has a chance of making the track team in manners. Mr. Sommers is coming to dinner." No wonder he feels his parents are living in his past, and don't understand him. There's nothing quite as infuriating as the tolerant smile—"After all, you're still just a child."

II

THE RIGHT TO A "SAY" ABOUT HIS OWN LIFE.

Decisions affecting the 'teen-ager should be made largely by him—certainly with him—never for him.

At every stage parents resist dropping control over their children. A child is born completely helpless, completely dependent and, by immeasurable degrees, takes on small responsibilities. In the process of growing up it is the wise parent who can gauge when the child is ready to do something for himself. It is hardest for both parent and child during his adolescence, because then he is reaching out toward adult responsibilities and is most jealous of his independence. And, of course, just at that point parents are most anxious that decisions affecting his future should be wise ones.

Jack wants to be an airplane mechanic when he grows up, maybe a pilot—he's not sure which. But either way, he wants to go to a vocational high school, and sees no point in anything else. His father wants him to take academic courses, and after make now and which it would be wiser for him to postpone.

III

THE RIGHT TO MAKE MISTAKES. TO FIND OUT FOR HIMSELF.

Parents see a 'teen-ager grown up one day and childish and scared the next, and find it difficult to take the grown-up part seriously. But that is the more important part, because it is the growing part. He needs to be encouraged, even at the risk of mistakes, but not "thrown on his own."

When something goes wrong, he is not ludicrous—it is part of the process of learning. That's as true of the boy who becomes ill smoking his first cigarette as it is of the 13-year-old girl who studies her first experiment with lipstick in the mirror.

It's funny, but it's not childish, and the parent does well not to laugh. Nothing so quickly widens the gap between himself and his child.

IV

THE RIGHT TO HAVE RULES EXPLAINED, NOT IMPOSED.

The 'teen-ager realizes that there are restrictions on his freedom laid down by society or by his parents which affect his behavior, his work, his schooling. He insists, however, that he understand these restrictions and their purposes, and that body is growing; he needs lots of sleep and rest. But it is only to the extent that Harry understands this that the rule will cease being a restriction and become O.K. with him. And if, on a rare occasion, he does come in fifteen minutes late—well, it is hard sometimes to tear one's self away.

V

THE RIGHT TO HAVE FUN AND COMPANIONS.

The 'teen-ager wants a full and rounded life, fun as well as work. He wants an opportunity for companionship, playing, dancing, reading, having friends. When the community does not provide it, he is forced to seek it himself.

Doris tells her mother, "It's my turn to entertain the girls Thursday. Will you have cookies?" From past experience, her mother knows what a nuisance this means: enough chatting and giggling to give her an all-day headache, crumbs and shoeprints on all the furniture (she sometimes wonders what kind of homes these girls come from—except that Doris acts exactly the same). If she says "No," she can expect Doris' hurt, "What can I tell the girls? . . . I'll never be able to go to their houses." If she's wiser, she says, "Of course, dear, but just remember about the shopping, and the cleaning up afterward."

This is equally true on a neighborhood level. Parents who dislike unsupervised cellar clubs and poolroom hangouts have a responsibility to help set up organized community centers. Youth will seek out social centers and their level depends on what society offers.

What Kind of Activities Are Best?

Encourage children to create a POSITIVE digital identity.

Encourage children to use technology well

Idea from Tony Wagner

What Should Parents Do

- Make EACH site your children use as safe as possible
- WATCH what your children do. Check on them frequently.
  - Make sure they are on sites you feel are appropriate
  - for lengths of time you feel are appropriate
  - at times you feel are appropriate.
- JOIN them on their internet sites from time to time

What Should Parents Do

- ASK them to show you who their friends are and to tell you about each of them.
- Ask for and use ALL their passwords and accounts on websites.
- Use an INTERNET FILTER to keep them off the worst sites, but DON'T RELY ON IT ALONE!
- Teach your children how to use the internet safely.

What Should Parents Teach

- Friends are people you know FACE TO FACE.
- Do not post photos of YOU OR YOUR FRIENDS.
- Remember that ANY photos you post or send can become public.
- Do not post personal information about you or your friends anywhere at any time. It is NEVER SAFE.
- What you say can often become public.

What Should Parents Teach

- Never say hurtful things about anyone on the internet.
- If you are being bullied on the internet TELL ME.
- If you are being approached by someone on the internet, TELL ME.
- If something does not feel right, TELL ME.
- What you read on the internet is often not accurate.
- NEVER meet anyone from the internet in person.

What Should Parents Watch For?

- Children spending large amounts of time alone on-line
- Children who are socializing on-line at odd hours.
- Children who switch off the screen the moment you walk in the room.
- Children who talk about on-line friends that you have never heard of.

What Should Parents Watch For?

- If you become aware that your child is writing or posting inappropriate words or images of people on the internet. This is cyberbullying.
- If you become aware that your child is being bullied.
- If you become aware that your child is being approached inappropriately by people on-line.

Finding and Working With Filters

There are many places around the internet to get filters for your family. The first two links are for programs that you pay for. K9 is a free program and it is what I use at home.

- www.netnanny.com

- www.cyberpatrol.com

- www.k9webprotection.com

- Your internet router may also offer some basic filter and scheduling capabilities.

Finding a mobile plan that's right for your family can be tough. And I'm not talking about deciding which texting or minutes plan to get, I am talking about parental control plans that help you manage your children's texting, talking and mobile web browsing usage.

The four main providers—Verizon, AT&T, Sprint and T-Mobile—all offer very similar packages when it comes to parental controls, so we did our research for you and compiled a summary of what each carrier offers. When it comes time for you to choose a plan, or maybe you've been wondering what's available and you just haven't had time to do the research, you can refer to this list to help guide your decision.

For beginners, all U.S. mobile carriers have parental controls that are almost identical. Each of them offer the ability to:

- » block picture messaging
- » block unknown phone numbers
- » limit what time your kids can text or call
- » filter web browsing, and
- » use GPS tracking to keep tabs on their physical location

However, sexting prevention seems to be an entirely different beast as the only practical option is to disable picture messaging altogether.

AT&T

Their main parental control program is called Smart Limits. It's offered at $4.99 a month and it lets parents limit the time of day their child's cell phone can be used, the number of texts per billing cycle, the amount of web browsing, and the dollar amounts for
